NCKCN To Transition to EdgeWave Email Filtering

In the next few weeks, NCKCN will transition to our new email filtering system, EdgeWave. Unfortunately, Postini is going by the wayside and although we have had a great working relationship, all things come to an end. Postini was bought out by Google, and we have to change. Fortunately, the transition to EdgeWave should be very easy and there is really nothing our members will need to do differently. The migration should be transparent as possible and the EdgeWave interface is really just a more modern way to manage your spam and virus filters. We'll send out more information as the time for the migration process nears. Rest assured that we will do our utmost to make the transition as painless and easy as possible.

This Month's FAQ - What Does "404 Page Not Found" Mean?

Question: Sometimes when I try to visit a website, I get a message that says something like, "404 Page Not Found." What does this mean and what should I do next?

Answer: This error message means the page corresponding to the URL you entered cannot be found on the site's server. It's possible the page no longer exists or that there is an error in the URL you entered. To rule out the second possibility, check the URL carefully to ensure you didn't mistype. If it seems accurate, try these steps:

1. Click the reload button in your browser.

2. Try removing one level of the URL at a time. For example, if you typed in "http://www.abc.com/x/y/z," remove "/z." If you still see nothing, or an error message, remove "/y," and so on. If you finally get to the home page (e.g. "http://www.abc.com"), try browsing or doing a search for the information you're looking for.
3. Test the URL at the site downforeveryoneorjustme.com. This site will tell you if just you are unable to access the page or if it's a problem with the site itself.

Short Tutorial - How To Print Only A Section Of A Webpage

To save on paper and ink, you may sometimes want to print just a portion of a webpage rather than the whole thing including the ads, comments, etc. After all, what's the point of printing extra pages that just end up in the trash?

Here's how to print only a portion of a webpage:

1. Highlight the portion that you want to print by left-clicking at the beginning of the text and dragging your mouse until the end of the text.
2. Once this is highlighted, click your cursor arrow on "File" from the menu bar.
3. Click on "Print" from the resulting drop-down menu.

Many webpages feature icons with options such as Print, Email, and Share. If this is the case, click on their Print icon and an advertisement-free version of the article will appear, ready to print.

Miami (CNN) -- One year after the Carnival Tri caught fire and lost power in the Gulf of Mexico frightened passengers in filth and misery for days, the ill-fated voyage can make Kimberly Northor down and cry.

That's what happened in the middle of her test federal judge in Miami last week, during the first February 2013 voyage.

Townsend, a 54-year-old mother of two and grandmother was one of 31 passengers who are plaintiffs in Carnival, alleging the company's responsibility voyage.
