Sites of the Month - Great Sites To Check Out In May

Learning For Kids

kids.usa.gov – Want to make sure your kids' brains are active while they're out of school for the summer? This site has learning modules, games, and videos to help students stay sharp during their break. Topics include art and music, history, math, government, science, reading and writing, and much more.

Make Travel Plans

kayak.com – When planning your summer trip, don't bother visiting every travel website. Instead, use Kayak to search them all at once. When you enter your preferences, Kayak finds the best hotel, flight, car, and package deals. It also gives you a "buy now" alert if prices are unlikely to decrease soon.

Jamie Oliver Cooking

jamieoliver.com – British chef Jamie Oliver tantalizes viewers at this site with dozens of delicious-looking recipes. Search by category and find scrumptious options like leg of lamb, hot-cross buns, green noodles, and so much more. Visit the special Learn, Family, and Health sections for tips and additional options.

Science Daily

sciencedaily.com – Whether you're interested in health, technology, the environment, society, or all of them, this site is packed with information. Read how "Pets May Cut Human Allergies and Obesity" or how "Basketball Games Mimic Nature." Subscribe to the newsletter to get science news sent to your inbox.

Short Tutorial/FAQ - How Do I Update My Browser?

Question: Lately some websites I've tried to access haven't been loading properly. Is this a sign I need to update my browser? If so, how do I do that?

Answer: Yes, it could be a sign that you need to update your browser, and you're smart to do so for both performance and security reasons. First, check to see if your browser is out of date...
