Do you have a Samsung s10 or higher smartphone that constantly drops your WiFi connection?

If you, a family member, or a friend are experiencing WiFi connection issues with your Samsung s10 or higher smartphone, here are a few quick remedies to get you back online.

1. Disabling Google Location Accuracy in your smartphones "Settings > Location" will work for most.

but if you are still having troubles after disabling Google Location Accuracy;

2. Disabling WiFi Scanning in your smartphones "Settings > Location > Improve Accuracy" as well should do the trick.

This is a known issue with Samsung s10 and higher phones but as of a couple weeks ago, there is no official fix for this released yet from Samsung.

An alternative includes:

3. Taking a look at your router. If you have had your router for many years, it might be time to invest in a new one. Mixing old tech with new tech does have its quarks and if your router is no longer providing firmware updates, we strongly advise upgrading this crucial device to keep you online.

If you are unsure of what brand and/or modal of router to purchase, please contact your local IT company. NCKCN and CTC highly recommends the company LockIT (offices in Beloit & Concordia) as they will be able to provide more insight of a decent and/or high-end router that you may need or are looking for and to add to LockIT's portfolio, they do provide Security services if you are interested in keeping your home or business network safe from all these cyber threats out there.

To learn more about this company and the services it provides, please visit their website: LockIT Technologies, LLC. Please note that the website may take some time to load for some individuals.
